Types of Admission

- Open Admissions
  - Almost all students are accepted.
  - Examples: Community College

- Selective Admissions
  - Certain GPAs, ACT/SAT scores are required. Also, an essay and/or interview are often required.
  - Examples: Some State Universities, Smaller Private Colleges

- Competitive Admissions
  - Space is very limited. High school course selection, test scores, and Extracurricular involvement are evaluated very carefully.
  - Examples: Some State Universities, Harvard University
Admissions

Competitiveness Terminology

Early Decision:
- For those who want an early response to have time to consider options if necessary. Early Decision applications represent a binding commitment to one college.
- Early Action is non-binding, meaning that you can apply to other colleges even if you were admitted Early Action.

Regular Decision:
- For those who want more time to submit senior year grades or other supporting materials. Decision made usually by April 15.
- Rolling admissions: decisions made continuously during application period.

Academic Preparation

- Admissions Offices evaluate student transcripts by considering the following factors:
  - Enrollment in Advanced Placement and/or the IB Program
  - Choosing high school courses which prepare students for their college major.
    - Example: more science and math for prospective engineering or pre-med students.
  - 12th grade course selection and grades are very important in college admission decisions
  - Your high school
    - The percentage of graduates who go on to four-year colleges and universities
    - Which advanced courses are offered at the high school
Your Transcript

- Your GPA and class rank.
- The courses you took and your grade trends.
- Have you challenged yourself appropriately?
- What does junior year tell us?
- Can you explain the bobbles?
- We will notice if you think senior=slacker.
Standardized Tests

- Which test should I take?
- How many times should I take it?
- What do schools do with my score?
- What about the writing portion?
- Is the ACT or SAT the only number that really matters?
Direct from ACT

ACT has published “benchmark” scores that correlate to a 75% likelihood of earning a “C” or better in that class in college.

These are:

- English: 18
- Math: 22
- Reading: 21
- Science: 24
Letters of Recommendation

- Clear and comprehensive recommendations can make a difference in admissions decisions.
- Recommendations can come from teachers, counselors, coaches, advisers, employers, etc.
- Provide 3-4 weeks notice for a recommendation to be written.
- Provide a “brag sheet” to the person writing the recommendation.
- Recommendations are reviewed looking for the following information:
  - Comparisons to other students in the class.
  - Information about the school grading system and/or competition for grades.
  - Illustrative examples or anecdotes.
  - Personal information (example personal problems or health issues which had an impact on performance.)
  - Other personal traits or study habit information.
Extracurricular activities

- Commitment, level of accomplishment, initiative, and leadership are most important.

- Admissions offices will ask the following questions when reviewing student resumes/activity lists in an application:
  - How much time does the student devote to this activity?
  - Is there evidence of leadership—is the student an officer or leader in the organization/sport?
  - Balance is best—do not limit involvement to one type of activity.
  - Volunteerism is very important.
List of Activities

- Don’t join every club senior year just to make it “look good.”
- We like to see commitment and passion!
- Don’t forget work and outside activities, too.
- This is a good time to brag a little bit!
- There are no activities that “count more” than others.
Personal Statements and Essays

- If the application asks a question, answer it. If it imposes a word limit, stick to it.

- The “tell us about yourself” essay
  - If it’s the first time you’ve thought about it, don’t write your essay about it.
  - Be passionate!
  - Let us get to know you.

- Make sure your voice comes through in all of the written portions of the application.
Hints for Writing the College Essay

- Start early.
- Be yourself.
- Be honest.
- Stay focused on your topic.
- Write and re-write.
- Get a second opinion.
- Proofread.
- Know which school you are applying to.
- Don’t confuse applying on-line with sending an e-mail.
